I am Elias Vance and I have more than ten years of experience in strategic communications and public relations. My motivation comes from assisting organizations in changing how they communicate and interact with their stakeholders. I am able to develop engaging stories, manage various media channels and build relationships that help a brand's reputation.

Since I live in Vancouver, British Columbia, I often go to other continents to serve clients from different industries. I earned a Master's degree in Communications from the University of British Columbia and my studies focused on crisis communication and digital influence. I am particularly curious about the changes in global media and the art of telling stories that are important.

When I'm not working with clients, I like to hike in national parks, take pictures or read about important people from the past. I am fluent in English and French and I am currently learning Mandarin, looking forward to the next chance to learn.
